EDITORIALS

First, I must apologize for the delay in publishing this issue of the Imprint. Sound familiar? Time passed so quickly while I was pursuing my Master's Degree and many activities, including work as a graduate resident assistant, seemed to fill my days and nights. As a result, Deb Sing finished compiling and typing the Imprint in August, 1982, with the help of Faye Larrow.

A highlight for me during my time at Clarion was being able to attend the Pennsylvania Library Association Conference in Philadelphia. It was the first library conference that I ever had attended, and the sessions were informative. I especially enjoyed the exhibit area with the various publishers and sales representatives displaying their "latest" materials and equipment. It was also enjoyable to see Philadelphia and a strong patriotic feeling overcame me as I visited Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell.

Now, as I enter the library field as a professional, I offer congratulations to all other recent graduates who also proceed to find a place in the library profession. We are equipped with the ability to manage a very valuable commodity -- information. It is our responsibility as librarians to do it wisely!

It does not seem possible that I have finally finished my M.S.L.S. after four frantic summers. But here I am at Clarion again, for "fun" this time (and Dr. Head's DIALOG course.)

During 1978-82 I've made many new friends and became closer to old friends, learned more about librarianship as a profession and seen another successful ALA accreditation (1981). I've come to greatly appreciate the talented faculty who work so hard for Clarion's School of Library Science. They have helped to make my job as a "practicing" librarian much easier and have given me confidence for the future.

I'm glad that I chose to return to Clarion for my Master's Degree in Library Science. It has been a rewarding experience, and I'll miss Clarion a lot.

FACULTY NEWS

Dr. John W. Head attended an advanced Lockheed DIALOG training session in May, 1981. He was selected as Chairman for the Rural Library Services Committee at the 1981 ALA San Francisco Conference. Dr. Head had a lengthy stay in Oil City Hospital last summer, but did not lose his sense of humor. He described this experience in the following manner: "I now have a large scar and a healthy fear of hospitals. They are no place to be if you are not feeling well." An on-going project for Dr. Head is assisting Dr. Vavrek with the national reference survey project funded by the H.W. Wilson Company for the Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship. In Fall, 1981, Dr. Head taught a course entitled "Rural Library Fundamentals" for non-degree rural librarians. Tuition and texts were funded by a LSCA grant and the State Library of Pennsylvania. Presently, Dr. Head has revamped L.S. 574, On-Line Information Systems, concentrating on the use of on-line search systems. Heavy emphasis is on the DIALOG system.

Dr. Margaret Jetter has participated in many workshops lately, including a storytelling and puppetry workshop conducted by Nancy Renfro, an author, designer and puppeteer from Texas, at Edinboro State College; a Radio Shack microcomputer workshop held in Erie, and a bibliotherapy workshop in Harrisburg conducted by Rhea J. Rubin, an author and therapist from Los Angeles. Recently, Dr. Jetter accompanied a group of students to the PSLA Annual Conference in Philadelphia. A study tour of the Rosenbach Institute, a collection of early American children's books, was a highlight of the trip. This summer Dr. Jetter was selected to participate in the annual Loughborough International Seminar on Children's Literature. It was held at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tennessee. This prestigious seminar, which is sponsored by the School of Librarianship, Loughborough, England, is usually scheduled in a major city of Great Britain or held in Europe. It is being held for only the third time in the United States. One hundred twenty five participants, including educators, librarians, authors, publishers, critics, and booksellers from the United States, England, Wales, Australia, and several European nations, will meet for one week of intensive study of topics relating to the writing, criticism, study, and teaching of children's literature. Dr. Jetter's other activities include serving as editor of Rural Libraries, a quarterly journal sponsored by the Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship, teaching a course entitled "Children's Literature for Parents" for the School of Continuing Education and presenting a workshop for the Clarion District Libraries on developing children's book collections.

Mr. Jack Luskay will be continuing to serve as editor of School Library Media Quarterly. He has been the editor of this journal since 1979. During his editorship, the journal's subscriptions have increased, the journal format has changed and plans are underway for a total journal redesign. Mr. Luskay moderated a workshop for journal editors from the ALA/AASL State Affiliate organizations at the ALA Annual Conference in Philadelphia. Mr. Luskay announced in July, 1982 that he was leaving Clarion State College to assume a library position at John Jay Senior High School in Katonah, New York. We will miss him greatly but look forward to news of innovative and creative happenings at this progressive school. Good luck and best wishes from all of us.

RURAL LIBRARIES AND THE HUMANITIES

by Mike Jaugstetter

Rural Libraries and the Humanities is a program series organized by the Center for the study of Rural Librarianship of the School of Library Science, Clarion State College. It is funded by a two-year grant (1981-1983) from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Division of Public Library Program.

This grant program was conceived as a support mechanism for local rural libraries in their efforts to provide programs of public interest in the humanities. Geared toward the Western Pennsylvanian counties of Clarion, Crawford, and Westmoreland, the project involves a series of workshops offered by the Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship, as well as public activities planned and conducted by the Benson Memorial Library, Titusville; Cicco and Associates, Inc., and Clarion Free Library.

During the project period, a number of invited speakers will present programs exploring issues and ideas relating to the project theme. The topics planned for presentation during the Spring, 1982 semester were: The Rural Family, Geography and Rural Land Use, and The Political Process and the Rural Community. As a long range goal, the Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship plans to publish and disseminate information gleaned from the project which is relevant to rural libraries in general.

While directed towards library personnel in the three counties of Clarion, Crawford and Westmoreland, all workshops presented are free and open to the public.

ST. ELIZABETH HOSPITAL MEDICAL CENTER SCHOOL OF NURSING LIBRARY

By Doris Crawford

The Library is the information center of the Nursing School and contributes to the achievement of the school objectives by providing an in-depth and up-to-date collection of books, pamphlets, periodicals and audiovisual materials which complement, correlate and extend the curriculum and provide for professional, cultural, spiritual and recreational reading. The resources cover the fields of nursing, medicine and preclinical sciences. Limited materials are available in humanities, social sciences and other areas. The Library provides for the information needs of the faculty, students and staff through its resources and services and by participation in resource sharing on the local, regional and national levels. Hospital nursing staff, staff development instructors, administration personnel, physicians, nurses working on advanced degrees, allied health personnel as well as others in the community also make use of the Library.

The Nursing Library houses a collection of 6839 books, 1552 bound periodicals, and 184 periodical subscriptions. Large collections of pamphlets and audiovisuals have proved helpful to the nursing students in patient education.

These holdings are extended by making use of the Hospital library holdings of 3000 books, 6038 bound periodicals and 273 subscriptions. A Union List:Medical Periodicals in Northern Ohio lists the holdings of 26 libraries and provides access to 1,952 titles. To make the utmost use of the periodicals, the following indexes are provided: Index Medicus, Hospital Literature, Cumulative Index to Nursing and Allied Health Literature, International Nursing Index and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. Access to the professional literature is further enhanced by means of the computerized on-line systems, MEDLINE and DIALOG, which are available in the Hospital Library.

The Library is centrally located in the School of Nursing and is air conditioned to provide for the comfort of library users and for preservation of materials. Drapes and carpeting are conducive to a quiet atmosphere and add to the attractiveness of the facilities which cover 3325 square feet. There is a reserve section which includes books and reprints listed in course bibliographies. A collection of historical materials is maintained for the purpose of preserving nursing, medical and institutional materials of historical value.

A variety of services are provided e.g. 1. Formal and informal orientation. 2. Literature searches and compilation of bibliographies. 3. Current awareness service which simplifies the process of scanning current literature by providing copies of the table of contents of journals to the faculty. 4. Notification of new library materials via bulletin boards, brochures, displays, new acquisitions index (subject). 5. Audio-visual services. 6. Media production (transparencies, slides, video tapes and self-learning packages). 7. Reference service 8. Interlibrary loans.

RURAL LIBRARIES - An Update

By Leslie Bard Corey

Rural Libraries, Volume II, number 1 was published in Spring, 1982. This was the fifth issue to be published, with the next issue forthcoming by the conclusion of this year. The Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship publishes the journal for and about rural library service. The cost of the journal is three dollars per issue.

Articles for the journal may come from all across the United States. Bibliographies, predictions, comparisons, survey results, and suggestions for rural library service are just a sampling of the various articles that have been published. The workshops that the Center schedules from time to time provide reports and manuscripts submitted by libraries and others in the field making the Journal an important specialized source. Though Rural Libraries is a specialized journal, it deals with many issues facing the rural library in society and comments and suggestions for future issues would be greatly appreciated. Ms. Becky Sheller serves as the editor for the journal and those wishing to submit suggestions or manuscripts for possible publication should forward the materials to:

Ms. Becky Sheller
Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship
School of Library Science
Clarion State College

In addition to the above journal, the Center for the Study of Rural Librarianship also publishes bibliographies dealing with various aspects of rural library service. These bibliographies are available for seventy-five cents per copy.

Seeing the cat and birds and bat found in unauthorized dorm rooms?

Bellydancing classes with Anisha?

Going on Dr. Vavrek's "voluntary" Penn State trips to Patee Library? (We really had a great time and enjoyed the Rare Book Room especially!)

The Tasha Tudor original bought by an admiring graduate student?

When we showed our creativity by writing bibliographies of soon to be released best sellers?

Those research projects that should have been done but weren't?

Spending hours in the library looking for the answers to reference, science, humanities, social science and government document questions?

When Chuck and Di's wedding was watched by millions - including a crowd of L.S. grad students on 7th Floor Campbell who struggled out of bed at 4:30 a.m.?
